

Tuesday 23rd of November 2010

Who's here

@Rowena – bee keeping fan – want to bring people to keep bees together

@Emma – worried about industrialization of food – needs to be re-localized.

@Tom – local economy and food security

@Diana – having good food on your doorstep should be a right. Should have no travel.

@Polly – Like growing my own food, Like eating my own food, wanting to get hold of good local food.

@Souad – dragged here from Germany!

@Marianne – campaign against superstore. locally sourced food is important and learning how to grown my own food in important.

@Eva – really like self-reliance. Both individually and as a community. Having connected with real basics of food it's about getting real @Jane – Like eating food that I know were it has come from would like to be more connected to the food production and health benefits.

@Justin – food being visible and accessible and interesting plus resilience before the crisis

@Fanny – I want to know what I eat. Where it is from and it's origin

@Miranda I have been keen on organic boxes for years had allotment – wanting to sell the idea bout local food

@Calum – food security – need to make people aware before everything goes badly wrong

@Katie – ethics of food and the politics local food means understanding the impact on the community.

@Stephen

@Vicky

@Dave

Poor and Unidentified Individuals Not community organization We don't know if we are allowed to grow and share food In the typing point we have slaved off supermarket but nowhere to buy anything In danger of people losing patience no alternatives on the ground Uniform not seasonal There is some organic but poor range Very heavy packaging 95% want to buy local no availability	Emma – Labeling Eva – local awareness (community and schools), bees & bakery/shop Miranda – Hens advisory Polly – market and schools Katie – community shop/bakery Jane – Community shop & community farm Stephen – Pâtisserie Diana – Bee bakery labeling Marianne – Community farm Rowena – local shop. Bees & community farm Fanny – Volunteer foe help Calum – Growing space Vicky – growing space community farm	We need to do some research to learn from other Group's experience Get people to come here and use their talk as a community event. Clarity and role and focus More action. Less meeting. Encourage as many people to demonstrate leadership skills. Be explicit and clear when requesting help Lead by example show people what to do

First Steps

Local labeling	Definitions and ideology and philosophy	Growing the market	Community Bakery	Inviting stallholders to talk about what it takes
----------------	--	--------------------	------------------	--

December 2011
Possible & Positive

2-3 Portobello Bee Hives in the orchard
Local honey produced
Make sure locally people have been warned
Other affected parties

Moved towards community shop
Clays old shop..like with fair trade shop
Educational resource
Two local farmers selling through market

September 2011
weekly market starts

Community Bakery
Meeting begins
November 2010

Growing spaces created
20 people started

The market thrives!!!
The market becomes self sustainable
More bread; More Chicken; More game pies
More local people attending the market
True cost for real food
Primary 7 project
Teachers in local primary project on world market

Local labeling
Sign on food saying this was grown with in rules
Polly spoke to Kitchener about festival
Banana republic
Fish shop
Diana Chamber of commerce
Adam from wine merchants linking to market

Join the food coop today!

Food is part of life

Accessible
Affordable
food

Portobello does
luncheveryday!
The Food Festival

local kids eating
at lunch time
together

Food in the streets

The shops include
Bakery
Vegetable
Fruit
Cheese
Beer
Honey
Butcher
All selling locally produced food

Food Sharing

Community
composting

The heart of Portobello...the market and the market makers

promoting local food